

Direct Contact Deceased Baby Cooling System

Dealing with the death of a baby is an incredibly difficult time and many bereaved parents want the option of spending time with their baby, rather than their baby being moved to the hospital or hospice morgue. The CuddleCot™ is used to cool the baby with a soft flexible cool pad within any room and allows parents time to bond and form memories as a family.

The CuddleCot™ is small, light and quiet. It can easily be carried in one hand and so can be used at home for parents as well as within the hospital maternity department.

The CuddleCot™ has featured on numerous news channels across the US and in newspapers, including the New York Times. It is in use in hundreds of US & Canadian hospitals, as well as 95% of UK hospitals & hospices and around the world.

Testimonials

"The CuddleCot™ is in regular use and has been used twice in just the last few days. Both the parents and the nurses were so pleased with the system and the Nurse in Charge said it was "brilliant to have the CuddleCot™ as it really helped the family. The nurses have all said the CuddleCot™ was easy to use and certainly gave more time to families and kept the babies very cool."

Esther Rose, PICU Family Liaison Nurse, Great Ormond Street Hospital, London UK

"Every moment spent is a precious gift and as a grieving parent you never know what your heart may need to continue its healing journey weeks, months or even years down the road. Across the board almost all the parents we spoke with wish they would have spent more time with their baby."

Corey Kruss, Bereaved mother, New York

"We have used the CuddleCot™ many times already this month alone with great success and satisfaction from both families and staff. Parents are informed of the benefit of cooling their infant without having to remove them from the room. Also the infant is kept on the unit rather than having staff going back and forth to the morgue in the basement.

Patients change their minds often about whether they want to keep the baby with them so we are able to meet their needs with less work and stress for the nurses.

We have had no complaints related to the CuddleCot™ and staff really like having it. Caring for families who have lost a baby is difficult but this makes it less so. I would heartily recommend the CuddleCot™ to any hospital."
